ALPHA OMEGA SPONSORS RISING STAR

BALTIMORE, MD – Each year Alpha Omega receives requests from people and organizations in the surrounding community asking for help and assistance. This past year there was a unique request in that the person that was asking for the donation attended the meeting with his father, Alpha Omega brother, Sherman Braxton.

The young man, Isaiah Braxton, is a player for the Mid-Atlantic Baseball Associations 13U Sykesville Storm team. The team undergoes a very physically demanding off season training regiment that includes several intense conditioning, strength, speed, and core workouts. They have access to and utilize an indoor practice facility that allows them to workout all year long even during winter months.

The cost to be a member of the team is costly from registration fees to travel expenses and even after fundraising efforts Isaiah was still a bit short on the funds for this season. So he prepared a presentation, which he gave at an Alpha Omega monthly meeting, asking for a financial donation to help him play this year. The brothers voted unanimously to contribute in his effort and with spring season quickly approaching, Isaiah will be out there performing.

The spring season begins in early April for the 13U teams, ending with an M.A.B.A. divisional tournament around June 20th for each age group. There is also an Awards Banquet in the winter to honor the top finishers from the spring season. The fall season begins the Sunday after Labor Day and continues for eight weeks of either 9 innings or doubleheader play on Sundays for the development of players.
